Goals

- Can distinguish between the use of 'don't have to', 'mustn't' and 'shouldn't'.
- Can use the modal verbs of obligation and prohibition correctly in a simple sentence.

I must work on Mondays. I don't have to work on Saturdays. I should stay late if my work isn't finished.

must

Doctors must have a university degree.

have to

Mechanics have to know how to fix cars.

should

Airlines should employ more women pilots.

Is it an obligation or advice?

Must and to have to mean an obligation. It is not your choice. We use should to give advice or an opinion. This is not an obligation.

obligation	advice or opinion
My car is broken. I must take a taxi instead.	You should take a taxi if you want to avoid sitting in traffic.
You can't leave your child at home unattended. You have to hire a babysitter.	You should hire my babysitter. My children think she's a lot of fun.

Positive structures

- Should and must don't change for different subjects. Have to does change for different subjects.
- We follow all three verbs with another base verb without to or -ing.

subject	modal verb of obligation	another base verb
I, you, we, they	have to	lose weight.
she, he, it	has to	lose weight.
I, she, he, it, you, we, they	must	lose weight.
I, she, he, it, you, we, they	should	lose weight.

Must and have to

Must and have to are very similar. However, we use must when we think it is an obligation and we use have to when someone tells us it is an obligation.

I must finish my homework before I go out.

Because I will not have fun if I don't.

I have to finish my homework before I go out.

Because my mum told me I have to.

Is it an obligation or advice?

1. He has to work on weekdays.

a. obligation

b. advice

2. I must finish my homework.

a. obligation

b. advice

3. She should work this Saturday because she wants to take a holiday next week.

5. I _____ be at work at 9am every day.

What must you do? What do you have to do? What should you do?

I must...

I should...

I have to...

Why?

Is it allowed or forbidden?

- Must not means something is forbidden. It is not your choice.
- Should not is advice or an opinion. It is your choice but it is not recommended.
- Do not have to means it is not an obligation. It is your choice.

forbidden	not recommended	allowed
You must not smoke in the office.	You should not smoke. It's bad for your health.	You do not have to eat that if you don't like it.
I must not drive over the speed limit.	I should not drive into the city during rush hour.	I do not have to drive my car. I can take the bus instead.

Negative structures

- Should not and must not can be contracted.
- To have to needs do not or does not in the negative.
 - Do not and does not can be contracted.

subject	negative modal verb of obligation	another base verb
I, you, we, they	do not have to (don't have to)	lose weight.
she, he, it	does not have to (doesn't have to)	lose weight.
I, she, he, it, you, we, they	must not (mustn't)	lose weight.
